SR Employee Teaches Classes for ANG Chiefs of Safety

MARCH AIR RESERVE BASE, California, Jan. 26, 2016 -- A Strategic Results employee is teaching several classes to recently appointed Air National Guard (ANG) chiefs of safety at a four-day training course here.

Dave Moore, a retired Air Force pilot who currently works for Strategic Results as an ANG Flight Safety Assistance Advisor, is teaching courses on Air Force safety rules and regulations, bird and wildlife hazards to aircraft, and the technology used to help pilots predict and avoid bird activity as part of this week's Air Reserve Component Chief of Safety course (ARCCoS). The course features a variety of sessions, most taught by ANG flight safety leadership.

The class on rules explores the regulations and instructions the chiefs need to be familiar with to run their wing's safety office, with a strong focus on mishap prevention and mishap investigation. The other two courses Moore is teaching focus more specifically on risk management strategies to prevent collisions between planes and birds and other wildlife.

"They're anxious to learn," said Moore, who has been teaching ARCCoS courses for five years. "We feel like it makes a really positive difference."

ARCCoS is offered twice a year, but Moore and fellow Strategic Results employee Don Phillips provide ongoing assistance and training for chiefs of safety, especially in completing mishap investigations and reports. Proper investigations and reports improve the ANG's ability to learn from mishaps and mitigate future risk.

Moore served in the Air Force for 31 years and flew C-5 and C-130 aircraft. Before joining Strategic Results last year, he had been a flight safety contractor for the Air Force Reserve for nearly 11 years.
